RECORD ATTENDANCE
MAY WITNESS EVENTS

Commissions, Cups Will Be Awarded; Final Parade
Is Slated

When Field Day is conducted next Wednesday by the University R.O.T.C. regiment, military will hold sway before probably the largest crowd to ever witness the exercises on the Kentucky campus.

Extensive plans have been made to have a record-breaking attendance at the meet which will start at 2 p. m. on Stoll field.

Special invitations have been sent to the parents of all the cadets of the regiment, to members of the state legislature, and to delegates attending the Reserve Officers association convention which will be held in Lexington on that day.

Pres. Frank L. McVey also has issued a general invitation to the public to attend the exercises, which will consist of competitive drills, a demonstration drill by Company "C," Pershing Rifles; the awarding of prizes for scholastic and military work during the year, the awarding of commissions and a final parade and review.

Maj.-Gen. Albert J. Bowley, of Columbus, Ohio, who is commanding general of the Fifth Corps Area, comprising Kentucky, Indiana, Ohio and West Virginia, will be the distinguished guest at the exercises.

Accompanied by his aide-de-camp Lieut. Williston B. Palmer, General Bowley will arrive in Lexington May 22. He will motor to Frankfort the following morning and will call on Gov. Ruby Laffoon, after which he will return to Lexington in time for the military exercises.

General Bowley returned to the United States recently from Hawaii where he commanded the Hawaiian division, said to be the only fully organized division in the United States peace time army. Relinquishing command of the Hawaiian department, General Bowley made a three months' tour of the Orient and arrived at his headquarters at Fort Hayes last month. He relieved Maj.-Gen. Van Horn Moseley, who assumed command of the Fourth Corps Area with headquarters at Fort McPherson, Atlanta, Ga.

Four seniors in the Reserve Officers' Training Corps who will be graduated with honors are James C. Bishop, cadet colonel of the regiment; Charles W. Kaufman, lieutenant colonel; Ralph G. Edwards, staff captain; and Evan E. Settle Jr. Honor certificates are limited each year to not more than five per cent of the graduating class. The class this year is composed of 80 cadets.

One of the most sought after awards to be presented that day will be the Rotary Club Trophy, which will be awarded to the graduating member of the second year advanced course, Reserve Officers' Training Corps, who is elected by secret (Continued on Page Four)

Students working on CWA are requested to bring stamped, self-addressed envelopes to the office of the dean of men in order that their May checks may be mailed to them. May 28 will be the last date any student can check his hours on the payroll. Students who wish the CWA to be continued next fall may aid in this matter by signing the petition in the dean's office.

The editors of The Kentuckian wish to announce that copies of The Kentuckian will not be available to members of the senior class until Tuesday of next week. The Kentuckian staff finds it necessary to sell all available annuals that it is able to procure from the bindery this week.

Bids for the senior ball this year are being distributed through the University post office. Each senior will get one date and two stag bids and the juniors will receive one date bid and one stag.

The dance will be held from 9 till 1, Wednesday, May 30, in the Alumni gymnasium.

Senior engineers-faculty dinner will be held at 6:30 o'clock Friday night, May 25, at the Phoenix hotel. All engineering seniors see Donald McCammon immediately.

All SuKy members desiring to attend the picnic Sunday will meet in front of the Alumni gym at 11 a. m.

The Inter-fraternity council will meet at 6 o'clock Monday at the ATO house.

Extensive Review Given Polish Corridor Problems

By HARRY LEE FRANKLIN,
Ph. D. (Leipzig)

Few political questions or problems of post-war Europe have received such extensive discussion as what is generally referred to as the Polish Corridor. German propaganda in this connection was intensely active until February of this year when a German-Polish agreement was made to end hostile propaganda formerly embittering relations between the two countries.

When Poland was restored as an independent state in 1918, number 13 of President Wilson's Fourteen Points provided for that country's access to the sea through territory indisputably Polish. On this basis, what is now popularly referred to as the Polish Corridor was transferred from Germany to Poland, whereby the province of East Prussia became separated from the Reich.

East Prussia, however, had been separated from Germany proper for hundreds of years before Frederick the Great forcibly took from Poland what is now approximately the Corridor in the First Polish Partition of 1772. American historical experts at the Peace Conference such as Professors Lord and Haskins were of the opinion therefore, that restoring the Corridor to Poland was simply an act of elemental justice.

On account of national pride chiefly, the Germans have never been reconciled to the separation of East Prussia from the Reich proper. They feel this lessens their prestige. Systematic, intensive propaganda in the press, radio, theater, cinema, and elsewhere aroused such hatred in Germany against Poland from 1930 until the first of this year, that at times an armed conflict between the two countries appeared imminent.

Polish historical claims to the Corridor are so strong that the Germans usually ignore this phase of the argument or offer very weak counterclaims. They oppose with more energy Polish ethnic rights to this territory, although Polish claims in this regard are substantiated by the last pre-war German census made in 1910 for the area now comprising the Corridor.

The Corridor proper, Pomorze as it has always been called in Polish or West Prussia as the Germans named the province when they seized it in 1772, had a total population of 990,145 in the year 1910, according to the official German census. Of this number 421,033 or 42.5 per cent were German, the remaining 57.5 per cent being Slavic.

In other words, notwithstanding domination of this territory for 138 (Continued on Page Four)

The Kentuckian Receives Praise From Reviewer

Racehorse Theme Prevails
Throughout U. K.
Yearbook

By MARY C. TERRELL

The Kentuckian is here—and it was worth waiting for. With its attractive color scheme of green and silver, its entirely original theme, and a group of exceptionally fine pictures, the 1934 yearbook is one that long will be remembered and appreciated by those who know and love Kentucky.

The theme, a Kentucky horse race, has been worked into the general plan of the yearbook to enhance the items which naturally appear in an annual. Division pages, designed by William Frazer, and printed silver on green pebbled paper, illustrations emblematic of the sport of kings and adapted to the special section of the yearbook which follows. Sub-division pages are done by Johnny Craddock in his own inimitable style.

In the feature section are full-page photographs of the Kentuckian beauty queen and her six attendants and also a group picture of the court of beauty. Annotated snapshots of campus personalities enliven the pages of the annual. Likewise, the snappy commentaries on sororities, printed in the last section of the book, provide an unusual and interesting ending.

Throughout the book, a top green border featuring tiny horses and jockeys, provide continuity from one green suede cloth cover to the other.

CLASS OF 1934

Happier days may be ahead for those emerging from campuses this year. Editors of eight out of nine college newspapers expressed optimism in a recent Literary Digest poll that the outlook for the 1934 graduates was brighter, while only one pessimistic editor felt that conditions were not at all rosy.

Basis for this optimism is placed in the fact that there is a general business pickup, coupled with a tendency of business organizations to choose for their personnel men trained in universities. States, municipalities, and private corporations are selecting educated young men and women for positions in their organizations leading to responsibilities, positions demanding those particular capabilities and aptitudes that most college trained people possess.

Another silver glint can be seen in the debunking which is being done in commencement addresses because of the disillusionment of the depression. Facts and truths are called facts and truths.

The picture is not all rosy. There are 250,000 fewer college students this year than usual, according to an estimate by the Federal Office of Education. Possibly 15 per cent of college graduates are without jobs. Many are enrolled at C.C.C. camps or are wandering aimlessly through transient camps. America is not exactly hospitable as yet, but the class of 1934 has a great opportunity to wage a war on poverty and want, greed and injustice, and insecurity. The position is "tough," but opportune.

ENGINEERS' DAY

Engineers' day, an annual event of 25 years standing among students and faculty of the College of Engineering will again hold the spot light of student affairs on the University campus when it is celebrated today.

This day, which was set aside for visitors a quarter of a century ago by the late Dean F. Paul Anderson, has been an integral minor part of the work of the college. It has served, in its period of existence, to acquaint students of other colleges on the campus and persons not connected with the University with the vast size of the college and its scope in the field of engineering.

Dean Anderson was proud of his college, and rightly so, when he established the day, and down through the score and five years since that time the college has grown and more has been on exhibit each year than was the preceding year. This year, even after the death of Dean Anderson, other members of the faculty of the college are keeping the day in his memory that it might serve as a memorial to him and his work.

Students in the college give of their time to make the day a success and it is certain that the Little Dean, in his new world, feels keen appreciation for them and the faculty members today.

PAY YOUR DEBTS

Throughout the school year students have found it a simple matter to take advantage of credit extended to them by their fraternities, sororities and local merchants. Now the time has come to prove that they were worthy of that credit.

Students have run up their bills, and now they must pay for their lack of foresight in determining how they would pay their debts at the end of the year.

The reputation of an individual is something that others refuse to ignore at any time, especially during years spent in college. To leave the University owing your fraternity, or owing a town merchant simply is putting a blot on your reputation.

If you cannot meet your obligations, go to your creditor, tell him of your difficulty, and then during the summer make an honest effort to put yourself in the clear. Play the game on the square; leave your Alma Mater with a worthy and valuable reputation.

VACATION AND OUR SCHOOL

Our actions this summer at home will influence greatly the people of the state in their judgement of the University of Kentucky. It is the people of the state who maintain this institution whose advantages we enjoy, and it will be those same people who will decide where their sons and daughters will attend college. We can show them by our actions and conduct that the University of Kentucky has been of benefit to us, not harmful, as many would have them believe.

There will be ample opportunity during the summer for each of us to make contacts with those boys and girls who are contemplating entering college, present to them a true picture of the advantages of coming to the University of Kentucky for their college training, and to convince them that it is to their advantage to do so.

In this manner we will perform a true service for them, for our school and for ourselves. We have a university, every improvement of which will be reflected in the calibre of the students who are graduated from it. By securing as students a high type of young men and young women from over the state, the reputation of our University will grow better and better, until the mere mention of the name will signify undoubted merit.

Let us conduct ourselves at all times as young men and young women of breeding, and not as rowdies or ill-mannered "collegians." By showing that we are an intelligent, healthy, happy group rather than a bored lot of loungers, we can disprove any untrue implications that have been drawn and can help our University to attain that continued improvement which is so much to be desired.

LIFE

What is life? What is this fallible and insecure thing to which we cling with utmost determination? The uncials of the ancient manuscripts and man in all his weakness has endeavored to expound and interpret the thing which he loves above all. The irony of fate, the sweetness of love, the hate and futility of war, and the bitterness of failure are tidiously blended into the pattern of life.

Life is begun as a cigarette is lighted by the brief flicker of a match, performing the duty of a mother. The puffs symbolize the years and are blown to the four winds, never to be had again. The ashes that fall are the sins that we mortals cannot exist without, and the many synchronisms that we, bound by chains, are to follow.

Life is but a friable as compared to the eons of time; yet we regard it and guard it as if time would not continue his tramping without our humble company. The slow burning and occasional sputtering of the tobacco coincide with the dull exciting moments in our existence, and reveals, as a falling star reveals its presence, the faults and frivolous whims of our nature.

The incriminating connection of love with life is, above all, essential in the happiness of mankind. And, as the stub is dropped it may be ground by the heel of fate into the sidewalk of time to disintegrate into the dust from which it sprang.

With the innovation of a train that will glide along at 100 miles an hour, some parents probably will hop aboard in an effort to catch up with their "speedy" children.

Last Minute Muse

There's the queerest sort of feeling that accompanies the last thing one does. Here is this semester's last regular edition of The Kernel staring us in the face and it seems almost a shame, after the way we have looked forward to it, not to be at least a little pleased now that it's finally come.

I can remember way back when I couldn't think of a thing to write about, and how I would try to console myself by thinking that one day there would be an end to it, and now that the last and final wind-up is here, I can think of more than enough copy for 50 papers.

The scuffle that accompanies press day, the hurrying about and finding people, the midnight chasing around, and the ugly moods are all over now. You can meet the editor on the campus and speak to him in a free and easy manner and

SHOP SIGHTS

By MARY REES LAND

Sport bags of Flexwood, lined with checkered gingham are to be found at Denton's. They are of real wood, one being of burnside maple. Alligator bags in pastel colors are said to be the newest thing in this line in New York. Envelope bags with white embroidered Maderia slip covers are quite practical. Some have two wistful Scotties, in white or colors, applied on them. Others are initiated or have floral designs. The Park Lane Rodolphe bags, which look like ivory cut into squares, may be washed also. They have a white strap and an ivory clasp and the inside purse has a binding to match the color of the exterior.

At Shipp's, one may get a white hat to match a dress of any cotton material. The type of hat whose brim dips in front and which has a high back, and the type which is called a rolled brim sailor are popular. There are hats of string to go with the string suits everyone is making. One is a swaggar hat with a colored bow. Another has a starched string crown with a stitched silk brim. A patent leather ribbon is used on it.

Lexingtonians have long relished the chicken croquettes and the chocolate fudge cakes with whipped cream at Benton's Sweet Shoppe. The proprietors have moved the Shoppe to a new location opposite Henry Clay High school. They are giving curb service and are staying open until after all dances. They make a delicious mint in the form of a rose which has an almond center, thus dispensing with the trouble of having to pass two dishes. Spun candy nests for ice cream add novelty to a party.

Graves & Cox have an experienced factory operator at the store this week who will put monograms on Arrow and Manhattan shirts without any extra charge. There are five monogram styles and six colors to choose from. If you want to lay in a supply of shirts before going home, getting them monogrammed probably will be the best way, after that of using sheer determined force to keep your roommate or fraternity brother from displaying your shirts to his admiring parents.

GRADUATES ARE GIVEN POSITIONS

Forty-two Students Placed by the Commerce College Senior Employment Association this Spring

Forty-two students have been placed during the spring months by the Commerce College Senior Employment association, under the direction of Mr. Lloyd Averett. This number includes two members of the graduating class of 1933, and those who were either graduated in February of this year or who will be graduated at the end of this semester. There is every indication that almost 100 per cent of the association members will obtain jobs before the semester is ended.

Results obtained from the booklet, "Bargains in Brains," which the association issues, have been satisfactory, according to Mr. Averett. Of the 42 jobs obtained, 30 have been through the contacts made by "Bargains in Brains."

During this school year, demand for women secretaries trained here at the University has been more than double the number of those available. Positions have been obtained for graduates of this department, as well as of the entire college. This wide recognition has been brought about partly through the cooperative work of the students of the association.

The last meeting of the year of the Employment association was held last night in White hall, at which time work for this semester was brought to a close, and arrangements for next year's work were completed.

Gaither Is Winner Of Bennett Prize

Winners of the two annual prizes awarded by the history department have been announced. The Bennett prize of $20 for the best essay on "Origin and Development of Parliamentary Government," was awarded to Mr. Lee B. Gaither, junior in the College of Arts and Sciences.

The Charles S. Brent Memorial prize in American Government, which consists of $60 worth of books relating to American history, given to the junior maintaining the highest standing in all courses in history during the sophomore and junior years, was awarded to Miss Patricia Park, junior in the Arts and Sciences college.

The Bennett award is made by a committee appointed by President McVey, and the Brent award is made from the records in the registrar's office.

It has been estimated that more than $10,000 is paid out annually to honorary campus organizations by students at Washington university.

More than 360 fellowship grants from the Julius Rosenwald fund were made between July 30, 1930, and December 31, 1933, a recent report indicates.

SENIORS---Before You Go!

SEEN FROM THE PRESS BOX

By JAY LUCIAN

The election of Joe Rupert for next year's grid captain undoubtedly will prove of great value to the team. There were no "politics" in the election this year. The players knew nothing of the election until they assembled in meeting. Credit should be extended Coach Wynne for the advantageous results of the meeting.

Rupert has the personal qualities of a leader besides being a brilliant and courageous player. His outstanding work will be a guide for his teammates to follow, while his lack of "swell-headedness," which sometimes accompanies star athletes, will tend to create cooperation on the squad. Joe circulates through the student body and has none of the derogatory aloofness of some athletic captains of the past. In the words of the two big boys on the squad, Jobe and Olah, "Joe's all right."

This has been an enthusiastic year in University athletics. Besides the lively interest shown in spring football, spring basketball, track and tennis, another sport, baseball, was revived. This brings into varsity play many boys who were previously inactive. Following this wave of athletic participation have come two new movements which seem headed for success.

The first has to do with making boxing a minor sport. Those who participated in intramural boxing in past years have expounded a fine brand of fistfuffs which in a few instances has been above the average shown in some intercollegiate matches. These boys do not engage in any other sport, and boxing would give them a chance to engage in varsity competition. Petitions have been started and already there have been over 300 signatures turned in. Data on boxing as a recognized university sport has been gathered from the majority of the southern schools and this will be presented at the next meeting of the Athletic Council which will be some time next week.

The second movement is to convert tennis from a minor to a major sport. There would be no difference in cost while the results would be immense. The University team for many years has been playing schools where tennis is a major sport. This year's team has won five out of eight matches, some of them with exceptionally strong foes. They won all seven of their matches with a Big Ten team, Indiana. Cincinnati is another powerful team that fell by the wayside.

However, next year's team should be the best to ever represent the University. In keeping with the calibre of such a team and with the improvement shown in tennis, the team should go forth as a major representation of the school. Press Box has mentioned before the possibilities of attracting tennis athletes to the University by means of a major tennis team.

Shades of Centre college! Ye old standbys who have been asking for a renewal of athletic relations between Centre and Kentucky will have the chance to see the first game to be played between the two schools since 1929 the forthcoming Wednesday afternoon when the tennis teams of the two schools engage in a match on the University courts. There will be accommodations for all fans who wish to attend and there will be no admission charge.

Cincinnati is, at present, Kentucky's most common foe on the athletic program, and has given the Big Blue some of its hardest games. However, except for a loss in basketball, the Wildcats have been triumphant over the Bearcat. The Cats have won in football, basketball, and tennis. The tennis victory was unusually appreciative since it has been almost a yearly custom that Kentucky will lose to Cincinnati on the courts. The games are well attended and it will be a fortunate thing for both schools to maintain their athletic relations at the present active level.

years, intense efforts toward Germanizing its inhabitants, and influx of German settlers and officials, the Germans still in the minority in 1910. In order to make a case for Germany on ethnic grounds, however, her propagandists usually add the 1910 figure for the Free City of Danzig to that for the Corridor proper, but this is manifestly improper since Danzig was not transferred to Poland by the peace treaty but re-constituted a free city under the aegis of the League of Nations.

In addition, the Germans claim that the 104,000 Kashubians who inhabited the Corridor in 1910 should not be considered as Poles and that their language is not a Polish dialect. This contention is quite unfounded, however, as Kashubian is clearly a Polish dialect and the Kashubians, for the greater part simple peasant folk, regard themselves as Polish. From 1871 when the German Reichstag was established, until the Corridor was restored to Poland, the Kashubian districts always returned Polish party deputies to the Reichstag.

Since German claims to the Corridor on ethnographic and historical grounds will not bear impartial scrutiny to establish a case in Germany's favor, her professional propagandists concentrate their efforts chiefly on trying to prove that transportation facilities across the Corridor between Germany proper and East Prussia are inadequate and intolerable in their application to German citizens. And furthermore that East Prussia is being "strangled" economically thereby and through its separation from the Reich.

Regarding passenger facilities, the official German railway guide shows that 24 trains traverse the Corridor daily, on which German travelers are not required to have passports or Polish visas nor subjected to customs formalities. Seating space for more than 1,500,000 passengers annually is afforded by these trains, but is utilized to the extent of about 52 per cent only, so that the German contention of "overcrowding of trains" is in general without foundation.

Under the existing Transit Convention, Poland is obligated to maintain passenger trains only when 80 per cent of seating space is utilized, but the foregoing shows that Poland goes beyond the letter of this Convention in providing adequate passenger facilities across the Corridor.

The writer travelled across the Corridor for the first time in September, 1929, on a through train from Koeningberg to Berlin without the slightest inconvenience. In fact but for the Polish names on the station sign-boards, one would scarcely have been aware of entering and leaving Polish territory.

Freight traffic through the Corridor is now almost 100 per cent greater in volume than in 1913, indicating facilities in this regard are thoroughly adequate. At the same time ocean shipping between Germany proper and East Prussia has declined considerably in comparison with the pre-war volume, which would not be the case were railway transit through the Corridor unsatisfactory.

Nevertheless, the separation of East Prussia from the Reich is usually referred to in Germany as a "mutilation," and the new borders as "bleeding boundaries." The writer has seen propaganda pamphlets in German on the Corridor in which these boundaries are depicted in maps or diagrams contained therein as bleeding profusely in order to make the German believe his country is not viable without abolishing the Corridor.

Without the Corridor, Poland with its thirty-three million inhabitants would be cut off from the sea, and consequently her foreign commerce and trade would be largely at the mercy of Germany. At present more than two-thirds of Poland's foreign trade is sea-borne and passes through the Corridor via the ports of Danzig or Gdynia.

Germany has 930 miles of coastline, 312 miles on the North Sea and 618 miles on the Baltic, with more than 60 ports. The Polish coastline afforded by the Corridor is only 46 miles in length. But the Germans want to dispossess Poland of this narrow strip of coast thereby depriving thirty-three million people from an outlet to the sea across territory to which they have the strongest historical and ethnic claims, in order that East Prussia with two and one-half million may be joined to the Reich. Obviously, this German desire can be achieved only through war.

Intramural

Despite the fact that the Intramural department has been greatly hampered by bad weather, tournaments, etc., it appears, barring unusual weather, that this year's program will be completed as scheduled. In every division the semifinals have been reached and in most divisions the finals have been reached.

Predictions as to the winner of this year's participation trophy should concede the trophy to the Sigma Chi's, who have piled up a safe lead over their nearest competitors. Sigma Alpha Epsilon. Fighting it out for third place are the Phi Kappa Taus, the Alpha Tau Omegas, and the Alpha Gamma Rhos. With the Alpha Gamma Rhos eliminated from diamond ball the decision rests between the Phi Kappa Taus and the Alpha Tau Omegas.

The "all year participation trophy" is now in the possession of the SAE fraternity. They also have won it once before. Conceding that they will maintain possession of the trophy for another year, it appears as if there will be a heated battle for permanent possession next year. The SAEs have also won the prize three times.

This week should bring a close to the play for this semester. The finalists in each branch of activity are anxious to finish the final rounds, for the competition to this point has been close and the outcome in doubt until the final minute.

Finalists in the different sports are: horseshoes singles, Winney, Delta Tau Delta, plays the winner of the Broadbent and Nichols match. In the doubles, Coffman and Endicott, Delta Tau Delta, play Broadbent and Goebel, Alpha Gamma Rho. In golf finals, Kirk, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, meets Bolen, Sigma Chi. Dasser, Independent meets Bringardner, Sigma Chi, in the tennis finals. In the doubles, Elliott and Finley, Phi Delta Theta, meet the winner of the match between Cody and Fontaine, SAE, and Heach and Vanaman, ATO.
